CENTRE FOR INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS AND LABOUR LAW, NLUO IN COLLABORATION WITH INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE MISSION

ABOUT THE CENTRE

CIRLL was founded with the intention of promoting legal awareness of workers' rights and working to uphold those rights in both the organised and unorganized sectors. Its goal is to protect workers' rights in industries ranging from agriculture to construction, paying particular attention to issues involving women and child labour. The Centre aims to carry out extensive research and fieldwork for this purpose, as well as collaborate on projects with other businesses operating in the same field. This would help us support organizations to the best of our ability while also making an academic contribution. The focus of CIRLL's energy and efforts is on the idea that people should come before money.

COURSE OVERVIEW

This is a comprehensive 14-hour training program that will delve deeply into the history, legality, and practice of combating bonded labour and human trafficking in India and elsewhere. The course has been divided into five modules, which combine interactive activities with case studies and legal analysis to ensure a holistic learning experience. The participant will engage in action skills for identification, rescue, and rehabilitation of the victims, including the role of stakeholders; law enforcement, judiciary, NGOs, and citizens. It focuses on the victim-centric approach to trauma and bringing about systemic change. This could also be achieved through case studies, discussions, and simulations to better and positively engage participants in the fight against modern slavery, justice, and rehabilitation of the victims.
